

Aline (Ali) Arruda

Child and Adolescent Health Service
Community Ambassador

About me

My name is Aline (pronounced Ah-Lee-Nee). I am Brazilian and have lived in Australia for nearly 15 years. I am a proud mum of two wonderful children, Amanda and Daniel.

I work as a Sustainability Officer and Programming Library Officer for a local council and have been a Consumer Representative at Perth Children's Hospital since 2022, when I joined the Multicultural Action Plan advisory group. My passions include my family, reading, sustainability, diversity and inclusion.

How I want to have an impact

I am committed to supporting my community to better navigate the health system. I am working to ensure multiculturalism is recognised and valued across all levels of government and society in this amazing country.

Why I'm passionate about community representation and inclusive child health services

I understand how challenging it can be for families from multicultural backgrounds to navigate complex systems without the right support. As a migrant parent, I have seen how language, culture and lived experiences shape the ways families access and trust health services.

When communities are represented and listened to, services become more responsive, culturally safe and effective, which ultimately leads to better health outcomes for children and stronger, more connected families.
